AN OPPORTUNITY TO STUDY INCLUSION AND SEND!

This 3 year part-time MA: Inclusion and SEND course offered by The Learning Institute in partnership with Newman University has a rich diversity of modules, enabling MA students to link their research and developing skills to their professional aspirations. Student's research questions that are important to their professional practice in the fields of Inclusion and Special Educational Needs and Disability.

Our MA is a flexible course, combining taught modules and Living Educational Theory research (Whitehead, 2010). Living Educational Theory is a methodology which starts with the student and their practice, values and the educational influences they have.

Our MA is designed for those who work in education with an interest in Inclusion and SEND. This MA will enable students to develop and improve their knowledge and leadership skills, enhance their professional profile and engage in rigorous research and high level enquiry. Upon completion of the MA students are able to go on to achieve the National Award for SEN Coordination, subject to certain requirements.

The modules support professional development through investigation of current issues in Inclusion and SEND in the context of values-led leadership. Research based values-led practice through a Living Educational Theory methodology is at the heart of our MA.

Each of the five modules provides academic rigour, excellent supervision and high quality resources and support.
